

Actions to stop doing:

We need to stop over-forking the repository. The repository had too many forks, and the history became confusing. Also, we agree that we should stop performing bad git merges. Procrastination had led to problems being left to the final days of the sprint, and resulted in user stories not being completed.

Actions to start doing:

We could use better meeting attendance. We also agree that engaging in group and peer programming may help us code more efficiently. Some members have had difficulty acclimating to the language. Therefore, would also like to reach out more to the other team members for support. Additionally, more hours should be contributed by all team members. Finally, we should attempt tasks earlier so that we can promptly acknowledge and resolve problems.

Actions to keep doing:

We have had a good amount of meetings and believe that we have a good design process. The meetings that we have had have been extremely productive. Our plans have been well thought out. The face to face meetings helped focus our collaborative efforts. The branching process we came up with near the end of the sprint has been very successful.
